Bromeliad Care

Our bromeliads are beautiful plants for bright interiors or shaded exteriors in frost free areas. They are notable for their attractive foliage alone but most are topped with large, showy, long lasting blooms. Most of these varieties are descendants of epiphytic plants and can be mounted on wood or grown in a well drained soil. The plants should be watered on the root area and down into the central cup, made by the leaves. This should be done when the roots dry out some. Liquid fertilizer can be added to the water once or twice a month. Bromeliads bloom only once but produce many offshoots which, when full size, will bloom. They grow best between 60°F and 90°F but can withstand temperatures near freezing and over 100°F without damage as long as they are shaded.
